Induction

The induction was opened by the project coordinator, Mr. Adama Bah who introduced the project and talked about the aim and objectives of the course. He introduced the teachers and administrator and their different areas of specialisation. He talked to them about why the various subjects were selected and the need for them to make good use of the subject areas to develop their skills and give them independence and confidence in life.

He told the learners to be very serious in their participation on the course and that they are very fortunate to be selected and should therefore make good use of their time during the course. He emphasized the need to keep to time because they are preparing for work or doing their own business.

Lastly he talked to them about the different partners and the Catalan Corporation and Development Agency which is funding the project.

Mr. Sheikh Tejan Nyang talked to the students about the role of ITTOG in the project and that the students are enrolled by ITTOG and should be ambassadors of the institute. He told them to be disciplined and follow the rules of the institution. He also explained the need to be on time and to dress properly to maintain the image of the institute.

He emphasized that the “No Woman Left Behind” project is very important to ITTOG because it is the first project that all the learners are women and that ITTOG will do everything to maintain the credibility of the course. So therefore, if any learner is not taking the course seriously she will unfortunately be dropped from the course. He thanked the learners and the teachers and the partners for making this project possible.

Course Design

All the teachers talked about their subjects and how the course will be taught to the students by presenting the time table. All the students agreed and were excited about the various subject areas.

To make maximum impact the students were divided into six (6) groups with different colours representing each group. Each group had 5 participants.

The time table was explained which groups the class into two (2) meaning each group had 15 students.

After this the students were shown round the teaching facilities, the kitchen and other classes of the school.

Finally the learners were given the chance to ask questions or comments. Generally, the learners expressed their satisfaction and promised to do their best in the course.
